HAZEL GREEN HERALD.

SPENCER COOPER, Editor.

HAZEL GREEN, KY.:
FRIDAY, Aug. 7, 1891.

MAJORITY 25,000.

The very latest returns from over the State show a majority of between 25,000 or 30,000 and the majority for the Constitution will be as big as the State of Texas, only three counties going against it, viz: Boone, 1,500; Estill, 400; Lincoln, 253. The People's Party elects twelve or thirteen Representatives, but will poll only about 10,000 votes for the State ticket. The Senate will stand: Democrats, 27; Republicans, 10; People's Party, 1. The House stands: Democrats, 28; Republicans, 17; People's Party, 12; Independent Democrat, 1, and one strict in doubt.

The People's Party was not in it; several counties not giving a vote for it. Judge Swango is our next Register of the Land Office.

Hargis and Arnett are both elected.

P. T. Barnum used to say, "People like to be humbugged," and the correctness of his axiom is every day more and more convincing.

Future historians will mention Judge Jim Jewell, of Lexington, as one of the statesmen of Kentucky. It was he who said, "Politics is hell."

We will next week publish an article from the Baltimore Sun, which will show the farmer the main cause of hardships that now hamper him, and at the same time point out a remedy for the evils which exist.

What is to be the remedy for diseases diagnosed as existing in the dominant parties? The imported Kansas physicians failed to prescribe on their recent visit, and the masses are at a loss what medicine to take.

THE HERALD was the first newspaper to befriend the Alliance in this part of the State, and has always been friendly to the organization, but it draws the line at the Third party. So did President Gardner, and we can't see how his motives could be impugned.

There is some consolation to Alliance members who were not drawn into the Third party, in the fact that President Gardner, of the State Alliance, and President Ringo, of this Congressional District, didn't take any Third party "in their'n." They are good Alliance men.

Charles Moore, of the Blue Grass Blade, says he left the church because he could not believe that the whale gulped down Jonah. Maybe, now that Hiskiaki was only recently swallowed by a whale, Charles will believe. If so, "he can come back to our loving embrace."

Now that the election is over, we should all settle down to the every-day affairs of life and pull together for the good of the country. Whether of the Third party, Democratic or Republican, our interests are in common and no man should be censured for the way he voted. This is a free country.

Mr. Snyder, who spoke here Saturday, said he "had never sought, and was not now seeking office." Mr. White, editor of the Paintsville Paragraph, says "Snyder was a candidate for Congress in Southwestern Kansas three years ago," and Mr. White ought to know, as he was on the ground at the time.

Referring to the speech of Mr. Snyder at Paintsville recently, the Paragraph says: "His speech was very inappropriate for this country, as the interests of the Kansas farmer are in direct conflict with the interests of the farmer of this section. The most of the farmers here buy all of their flour, and have no desire to mortgage their farms, and it is the height of folly for the farmers here to assist them in their two main objects—to advance the price of wheat and to have the government issue them money upon their farms and products—which is really only to aid in carrying out their first object. If you have not looked upon it before in this light it is high time that you investigate this matter and indulge in a little serious reflection before you lend your assistance to that party."

SWALLOWED BY A WHALE.

Jonahlike Experience of a Japanese Sailor Graphically Narrated.

A Tacoma (Wash.) special says: "The bark Guy C. Goss, with a cargo of $500,000 worth of tea, dropped anchor here forty-four days from Yokohama, long overdue. When fifteen days out, Tom Hiskiaki, a Japanese sailor, mounted to a top-sail to reef it during a gale. A lurch of the vessel threw him headlong into the sea, and he was seen suddenly to disappear. The life-boat was put out, but no trace of the missing sailor was found. When returning to the vessel, a whale rose to the surface. The crew then suspected what had become of Hiskiaki. The whale seemed to be in great distress. Suddenly, after a violent convulsion, Hiskiaki was thrown from the whale's mouth onto the crest of a wave and upon the deck of the Goss. He was unconscious and badly injured. Careful nursing brought him around, and he is now in his normal health. Capt. Mallette vouches for the truth of this story, and the sailor was pointed out."

Howards of Ointments for Cancers That Contain Mercury.

As mercury will surely destroy the sense of smell and completely derange the whole system when entering it through the mucous surfaces. Such articles should never be used except on prescriptions from reputable physicians, as the damage they will do is too fearful to the good you can possibly derive from them. Hall's Catarrh Cure, manufactured by F. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo, O., contains no mercury, and is taken internally, and acts directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces of the system. In buying Hall's Catarrh Cure be sure you get the genuine. It is taken internally, and made at Toledo, O., by F. J. Cheney & Co. Sold by druggists, price 75c. per bottle.

Many Persons Are Broken down from overwork or household cares.

Brown's Iron Bitters rebuilds the system, aids digestion, removes excess of bile, and cures malaria, gets the genuine.

Democratic Primary Elections.

Pursuant to an order of the Democratic County Committee of Wolfe county, there will be a primary election held in each voting precinct in Wolfe county on Saturday, September 5, 1891, between the hours of 7 o'clock A. M. and 6 o'clock P. M., to nominate a candidate for the office of Circuit and Common Pleas Court Clerk and Sheriff of Wolfe county, to be voted for at the regular election in the year 1892. At said election all Democrats will be entitled to vote. For the purpose of paying the expenses of said primary election the candidates for said offices will each pay to the chairman of the County committee $5 on or before August 31, 1891, at which time the poll books will be made up and sent to the various precincts, and no name will be put on said poll books after that date, nor at that except he has paid the $5 aforesaid; and in the event said amount of $5 from each candidate does not pay the expenses of said primary election, the candidates receiving the majority of votes for said offices of Clerk and Sheriff shall pay the remainder of said expenses pro rata. The board of election, etc. will be published in due time.

By order of committee.

JOSEPH G. LEVINS,
Chairman Dem. Co. Com.

To Teachers, School Officers and Patrons of the Public Schools of Wolfe county: Notice is hereby given that the Wolfe County Teachers Institute will be held at Campton, Ky., Aug. 24-28, 1891. All are respectfully invited to attend.

Most respectfully,
H. N. HORTON,
County Superintendent.

Take Notice.

All persons knowing themselves indebted to G. B. Swango must make settlement at once. His accounts have been placed in my hands for collection, and when I call upon those owing him I shall expect them to settle. If they do not I will warrant them and they can then pay debt and costs. I will take any kind of stock, at good prices. Respectfully but earnestly yours,
CHARLES SWANGO.

Ayer's Ague Cure is a vegetable product, and is a never failing remedy for all malarial diseases. Warranted.

The Parent of Insomnia.

The parent of insomnia or wakefulness is in nine cases out of ten a dispeptic stomach. Group digestive glandular system, indigestion interferes with it. The brain and stomach sympathize. One of the prominent symptoms of a weak state of the gastric organs is a disturbance of the great nerve entrapment, the brain. Investigate the stomach, and you restore equilibrium to the great center. A most reliable medicine for the purpose is Hostetter's Stomach Bitters, which is far preferable to general sedatives and powerful narcotics which, though they may for a time exert a soporific influence upon the brain, soon thereafter act so powerfully to injure the tone of the stomach. The Bitters, on the contrary, restore activity to the operations of this important organ, and the beneficial influence is reflected in sound sleep and a tranquil state of the nervous system. As the brain and stomach are given to the action of the liver and bowels by its use.

We are authorized to announce W. A. BYRD, of Torrence, as a candidate for Sheriff of Wolfe County, at the August election, 1902, subject to the voters of the county. Mr. Byrd says he is a Democrat, and expects to remain one; he does not believe in fraudulent means of securing county office, and if honored to the position of Sheriff will perform the duties regardless of person or party.

We are authorized to announce JONAS P. VANSANT, of Campton, as a candidate for Circuit Clerk of Wolfe County, subject to action of the Democratic party. Had 8 years experience as Deputy Clerk. Your support and influence respectfully solicited.

Dr. "Shack" Waldeck, of West Liberty, dined at the Day House Tuesday.

For curative effects, one bottle Ayer's Sarsaparilla is worth three of any other name.

Mrs. Ellen Pieratt has the thanks of the editor and his better-half for potatoes we have received this year.

Mrs. Belle Godsey has the thanks of ye editor and his better-half for some of the nicest Irish potatoes we have ever seen. They are of the red neshannock variety.

J. H. Bennett, representing Yankee, Seip & Co., of Chillicothe, O., writes us that he expects to visit this section soon, and requests that orders for hats, etc., be held for him.

Mort and Asa Pieratt and their wives were here Sunday to see Mrs. Judge Swango, who was at that time very ill, but, as will be seen elsewhere, is now very much better.

Mrs. Emily Lacy, of this place, accompanied by Master Courtney McGuire, left Tuesday for a visit to her sister, Mrs. Eveline McGuire, and other relatives at St. Helena.

Uncle Billy Cox 83 came up to vote Monday, and brought along for the editor a dozen of the finest red plums we ever saw. Uncle Billy seldom gets to town, but when he does come he brings us a token of his esteem.

Mrs. Judge Swango has been quite ill for ten days or two weeks past, but thanks to an overruling Providence, Dr. Taulbee's skill and careful nursing, she is now much improved and will soon be restored to her family and friends.

News reached here Monday that Miss Annie Parsons, a sister of Mrs. Green Butler, of this place, died at Mt. Sterling Friday, at the age of about 27 years. She had been sick quite a while but died very suddenly during the absence of the family. Mrs. Butler has the sympathy of a host of friends here.

Breck Harper, writing us from Georgetown, Texas, July 24, says: "Please allow me to speak a few words in THE HERALD. I was glad to get your paper. I think it is the best paper in the world. I am in Texas and will never see Kentucky any more. Texas is a fine place and crops are good; cotton is fine."

Porter Lacy, of Lacy creek, who is usually pointed about all the marriages that take place, informs us that Polk Bullock and Miss Alabama Cundiff, both of Breathitt county, were married at the residence of the bride's father, Theodore Cundiff, on Sunday last. He did not know who performed the ceremony.

Willie Kash, of Clay City, and Robert Percy Kash, of the Louisville Masonic Home, have been visiting their mother, Mrs. Nannie Kash, for several days past, and the school record of her son, Robert Percy, is enough to make her a mighty proud mother. Here it is, and it should put the little fellow on to even greater things. He received ten beautiful cards during the ten months, one being awarded him at the end of each month for first honors in his studies and good conduct.

He also received the prize in the fifth grade at the close of the school for good conduct, a handsome flexible Bible, presented by his teacher, Miss Myrtle Watson. His mother is justly proud of her boy, and every Master Mason in the State will watch with fatherly interest the future career of little Robert Percy Kash, in the hope of some day seeing him one of Kentucky's brightest men.

On Thursday of last week B. M. Combs, of Breathitt, and Miss Malissa Holton, of the Holly neighborhood in this county, were united in marriage at the residence of the bride's mother, Rev. J. J. Dickey, of Jackson, officiating. The attendants were Sherman Cope and Miss America Wilson, and Will Hampton and Miss Dulcinea Hunt. Porter Lacy, of Lacy creek, attended the wedding, and he says he never before saw such a crowd on a similar occasion in the mountains. He says the wedding feast was a spread fit for the gods of creation and mankind generally. The groom is an enterprising young business man of Breathitt, and the bride one of Wolfe county's fairest flowers. THE HERALD sends congratulations, and wishes the couple an endless life of joy.

We acknowledge the receipt of a very handsome photograph of the clothing house of Louis & Gus Straus, Lexington, leading clothiers of Kentucky, and it is one of the most perfect we ever saw. Lou and Gus, the former standing in one of the front doors and the latter just to the left in front of the store, each look as natural as life, and the view gives a good idea of the immense establishment. Will Darnaby and Gribbin, salesman and book-keeper, respectively, are plainly recognizable in another front door, but Tom Cassell, Lucien Bowyer and Charles Quinsberry are not seen. Guess they're in the house waiting on a lot of customers, as usual. When you go down to Lexington call and see Louis & Gus Straus, and tell 'em we sent you.

The Citizens' National Bank, Winchester, is again advertised in our paper today. The original contract was for six months, but Mr. Hampton, the wide-awake cashier, realizing that THE HERALD had done great service in extending the volume of business of his bank, wrote us to continue the ad. for another six months. It will pay those interested in banking affairs to write Mr. Hampton, or better still, call and see him when they get to Winchester.

The camping at Bethel closed on the 29th of July with very good results. Rev. F. Agar and wife were assisted by Revs. J. Tutt, W. Manker of Maytown, Dr. Stamper of Campton, M. Center and F. Creech of Laurel, and others. Good order prevailed and the friends at Bethel showed their esteem for the evangelists by sending them a load of provisions, vegetables, etc., which was thankfully received.

See adv. of Central University, Richmond, Ky., in this issue of our paper, and write Chancellor L. H. Blanton for particulars. This is one of the best schools in the State, and parents wishing to place their children in a good school will do well to investigate.

The Magoffin county camping will commence Friday, August 28th, 1891, and continue over two Sundays. The meeting will be in charge of Bro. Sneed, of Paintsville, and Bro. Dover, of Catlettsburg, and all preachers who attend will be cared for.

Mrs. Louisa Wilson, who has been confined to her room for several days with something like flu, is now much better.

Consumption Cured.

An old physician, retired from practice, having had placed in his hands by an East India missionary the formula of a simple vegetable remedy for the speedy and permanent cure of Consumption, Bronchitis, Catarrh, Asthma, and all Throat and Lung Affections, also a positive and radical cure for Nervous Debility and all Nervous Complaints, after having tested its wonderful curative powers in thousands of cases, has felt it his duty to make it known to his suffering fellow-men. Actuated by this motive and a desire to relieve human suffering, I will send free of charge, to all who desire it, this recipe, in German, French or English, with full directions for preparing and using. Sent by mail by addressing with stamp, naming this paper. W. A. NOYES, 820 Powers' Block, Rochester, N. Y.

George Drake, candidate for Sheriff, was here Wednesday mixing with the mob, and he said he was meeting with every encouragement. He has come home to stay, there being now no trouble on the K. U., and will make a hot canvass from now on.

See adv. of Prof. Greenberg in this issue of our paper. He is located at the Day House, and those who wish to have eyes treated should call and see him.

Miss Lillie Stephens, who is visiting her grandmother, Mrs. Louisa Wilson, has again placed us under obligation for a nice present of tomatoes.

Prof. Greenberg will remain in Hazel Green for a short time, and those needing his services should call on him at the Day House. Eyes tested free of charge by the finest instrument in the world. He will also visit Campton.

ESTRAY NOTICE.

The affiant, Noah Wyatt, states that he has taken up strays, on his farm in Wolfe county, about 2 1/2 miles southwest of Campton, Ky., 3 hops, about 12 months old, of black and white spotted color, marked with smooth crop off each ear, and two splits in left ear and one split in right ear. I have had same appraised by J. S. Cable, of Wolfe county, Kentucky, who assessed the value of said dogs at $7.50, and the owner of same can have them by proving and paying charges for them.

A MAGICAL WORD.

If a merchant has goods, but customers none,
And runs stores like in the face;
If his credit is as good as dead,
From morning till night to his place.
Is anything helpful to brace up this man,
If only the remedy tried?
Can anyone tell of a trade-bringing plan?

"Why, tell him to advertise!"

If a new preparation to cure all the ills
Of suffering folk upon the globe,
No matter if taken in liquid or pills,
Is some Yankee drug store's trade bribe,
What should the man do, and do his best?
What is it that captures the prize?
What gathers the shoals from young and old?

"Why, bless you, to advertise!"

If a man takes an acre or two of a farm,
That's worthless as the wind-blown sand,
And runs it as easily in new city lots,
And as successful hires to about,
Then if he plants some short word's states,
To show where each full-sized lot lies,
What is it he does—and the money he takes?

"You bet he will advertise!"

And so the world over, this magical word,
The others of wealth opens wide,
Its power extends where language is heard,
For some its usefulness tried,
A man he once uses it, if with good sense,
No other plan ever tried,
But sticks to it close, gathers dollars and pence.

MY ROMANCE.

Who the Ghost at the Old Home Really Was.

Into every life comes a great sorrow,
Sooner or later; and when I was Twenty-two my parents died, almost
At the same time.

In the first agony of my grief I closed
My ancestral home, just as it was,
Dismissing the old servants and intrusting
The keys to a valued friend of my late father. My bereavement gave me a gloomy turn of mind, and study was my only solace. Through all my college days and preparation for the law,
I made few friends and never visited the dear old home, hallowed by so many tender recollections.

Five years at the bar, without any homes or outside pleasures, began to prey upon my health; and in the summer of 1901 my physician peremptorily ordered me to rest.

My nerves were worn with the tension of pleading the case of Bond,
in the great case of Bond and Bradstreet,
which so attracted the most aristocratic circles of Boston in that year.

Most of my classmates were married,
but, as yet, I had never seen a woman
I cared to spend an hour with since my fair mother died.

I proudly said that love was a myth,
beyond the ties of blood; and not a particle of romance was in my mental composition.

Realizing that my physician's advice was such as I ought to follow, my thoughts turned to the long-deserted home in Fairleigh, but two days' journey from Boston.

I arrived at dusk on a warm summer evening, and, taking my gripack in hand, sought my old friend for the key
of the silent home.

He greeted me with delight, and urged me to remain with his family.
Years had silvered his hair, but had not cooled his regard for my father's only child.

"I don't like it at all, Frank," he said, as I took my departure. "You will have the hypo in that house. It hasn't been aired, is damp; really, you must not go."

His earnestness was so impressive
that I asked:

"Why? You must have some more potent reason, Mr. Lee."
With evident embarrassment, he answered:

"I hear, unpleasant as it may be to you, the house is said to be haunted lights are often seen, gleaming from the windows, and—"

"Nonsense! I don't believe in ghosts.
There is plenty of fuel in the shed—and was—I have matches. Heat will conquer the dampness, and a revolver will dispel all the ghosts I believe in. Come over in the morning and you will find me all right."

I stood at the gate and looked up at the great, rambling structure. All was dark and still, not even a breath of wind stirred the leaves of the large honey-suckle that climbed its own sweet will over one wing. The air was heavy with its rich perfume.

A rose tree, growing tall and branching, was laden with blossoms, their pale white gleaming in the darkness.

The borders of the once well-kept beds were rank and tall, and a hardy hibiscus had nearly obstructed the pathway. At least, no visible hand had disturbed my mother's flowers.

The key turned rustily in the lock and the door creaked on its hinges. I stood for a moment like a guilty creature ere I entered, and almost doubted the propriety of spending a night in a dwelling that had not been occupied for nine years.

The air was close but not as damp
and musty as I anticipated, and lighting a small lantern, with which I had provided myself, I went in.

I stepped of the hanging-lamp in the hall, but found it destitute of oil, as I expected.

One in the parlor was full and, to my surprise, with no oil seemed candlelit. Its light illuminated the room and lent a homelike glow to its appointments.
I sought the library and soon had a glowing fire in the grate. Little shivers ran down my back and I began to feel uneasy "ears which I resolutely shook off."

I busied myself around some bedding
by the fire and improvising me a couch on the lounge. Although a sultry summer's night, the fire was not uncomfortable.

Reclining in the very easy chair
where I used to nestle as a child, with my feet on the tarnished brass fender and a cigar between my lips I tried to feel at home.

The books looked down at me from the shelves and old memories kept me company.

What a neighborhood this must be,
not a thing had been disturbed in all these years; indeed burglars were unknown in Fairleigh.

A slight noise in the room above aroused me, and I took my lantern and explored the chamber.

"Bats," I said, as I was about to descend, when I again heard it: this time I knew it was in the attic. I could hear footsteps, distinctly.

Secretly myself beneath the stairs I turned my lantern down and waited.

I am no coward, but it was no pleasant sensation to wait for those soft foot-falls to reach the lower stair. The stairway was closed up in the old style with a door.

A hand was on the latch. I grasped my revolver. The door opened, softly and slowly, and I turned on the full light of my lantern at the same time pointing my pistol at—what?

"Stand off a fire!" I cried in a voice that echoed through the long, dark hall.
A feminine shriek answered me, and a form crouched down in the stairway.

My pulses beat tumultuously as I held the light so close to her face as to almost blind her.

"What are you doing here?" I demanded, sternly.

"No harm, sir," returned a musical voice, and the form rose, revealing a slight girl of some eighteen years with great startled eyes as soft and velvety
as a fawn's, looking out from a delicate, wild-rose face framed in masses of golden hair.

"Excuse yourself," I said, pointing at the traveling-bag she carried. "Are there any others?"

"No, sir," she said, with a radiant glance in those wonderful eyes.

"Come downstairs then and tell me how you come to be here."

She obeyed, and was soon quietly seated before me with a spirit-lamp.

"You wonder, sir, how I came here in your house," questioning, I bowed assent. "Very well, I will tell you. I am a poor working girl, and this is the first time I was out of employment. The temptations of the city are great to a poor girl like me, and I came out here in the country. No one would hire my eyes, except her hands, so soft and white."

"I never did do housework, but I could. I work in a printer's office. Some one told me about this house, and I ran through the grounds of the house. It was all so cool and restful I longed to stay. I got into the house, and while I wandered through the rooms, a terrible tempest came."

"I had to stay, indeed I did, sir, and sleep sweetly in a room in the upper story."

"That must have been my old gentleman that prompted me to stay. I thought it could do you no harm, and me, oh! so much good to spend a few quiet months
in this great empty house."

"I took my lamp with a spirit-lamp.
I have not taken anything, truly, sir;
but I know it was very wrong. I keep a light burning all night and people say the house is haunted. It is—by me.
This is only my first day, and I am in white. If I need groceries I start before daybreak and walk to A—coming home after dark."

"That is very good, sir," nervously clasping and unclasping those tiny hands.

A great pity welled up in my heart for the child-like creature. The spells of a woman, beginning to cast
her glamors over me, Frank Linwood, suborned lawyer that I was?

My father never turned a dog away from his door hungry and cold. Mine was not a charitable heart, but I knew the law of kindness.

"You must not go to-night," I said,
and I kept my strange, slight, ghost-like form, almost afraid, for one of those sharp, nerve tempests, that at once follow a sultry day was rising.
Blinding flashes of lightning made the darkness fiercer eyes with her hands,
and the heavy thunder shook the house.

I had noticed some heavy, dark clouds drifting all night the horizon
as I stepped from the station to Mr. Lee's, but the tempest came upon me as a surprise.

A heavy clasp of thunder and a sharp flash brought us both to our feet. Ellen Tidwell laid her hand on my arm, began to sob with terror, and I soothed her like a child. The touch of her hand stirred my sluggish blood, and I felt the silky feel of her hair for hours after its withered trails brushed my cheek.
My plans were quickly made.

"Have you no friend or elderly relative who can come here and stay with you? If not, I will pay you a monthly sum to keep the house open and to put it in such order as would please my mother if she were alive."

"Certainly, it is not proper you should stay here alone. I shall board at a friend's during my visit, but I would like to keep the house open while I stay."

"There are repairs, of course, needed;
carpets need taking up, drawers overhauled. I fear rats, mice and moths have been at work."

A brief, friendly nod from her cheeks.
I feared I had wounded her pride.
"You will do me a favor, Miss Blaine."

"You are very kind. I will stay if I am old and mild will come out to chaperone me," archly.

I wonder now that I did such a quixotic thing. I must have been fascinated by her beauty, and the influence of my surroundings made me self-heated.

I breakfasted at Mr. Lee's and bore his railway very well when I told him I had leased the house to a middle-aged lady and her niece for the season.

In due time Mrs. and Miss Blaine took possession and neighbors began to call on them. It was very pleasant to have the house occupied. I was a freeer's passion, I almost disliked to have surprised Ellen, or Nellie, as I learned to call her, seated at the piano.

"Do you play?" I asked in some surprise.

A brilliant movement, followed by a soft accompaniment and a bird-like song, was her response. She enjoyed my astonishment; music was my mother's passion, so I spent many evenings, with anyone use her instrument but conquered the feeling and sent to the city for a piano tuner. It was really a fine instrument and Nellie quite a performer, so I spent many evenings, with Mrs. Blaine nodding in her chair, listening to her simple songs or gay fantas-ties.

She was mistress of the violin and showed an almost childish joy when I brought one, that had been mine, from some hidden recess. I have heard many masters handle the bow but never one so free, so delicate, so touching and thrilling strains from the instrument.

Mrs. Blaine's small eyes would open,
for she spent the most of her time sleeping, when Nellie struck the first chord. This was something about the woman that always repelled me, and the way she looked at me from her half-closed eyes really made me nerve-ous. She wore a wig of that peculiar faded, reddish brown which virtually ladies so much affect, and her manners were rather coarse.

As deeply as I was in love with her niece, I recoiled from becoming connected with her mother.

The grounds at the rear of the house
sloped down to a river, flowing broad and free, and I soon had a gay little boat for my use on long afternoons or evening strolls.

One day, as I was in the boat, I was suddenly startled by a man's voice calling to me from the shore. I looked down and saw a man, about thirty years old, with a broad forehead, dark hair, and a mustache, looking at me with a friendly gaze.

"Hello, Mr. Lee," he called. "I'm Jim. I'm the new man on the boat."

Her selection was "Morte d'Arthur,"
and, as she read, every word fell clear and pure like the soft chime of silver bells.

A long silence fell on us as the last words of the poem fell from her lips;
not broken until she arose and glided
across the room with her peculiar, undulating motion, to adjust "music" to the music.

Uncas, as usual, was asleep
in her armchair; as she bent over the coarseness of the elder lady's dress contrasted sharply with Nellie's slender figure.

She came back and sank down on a low divan near me.

I passed my hand over her bright
head, the nearest approach to a lover's caress that I had ever made.

"Tell me, Nellie, how is it that you can wear such—tulle?" This, feeling the stuff, "like one of my mother used to wear."

A passionate burst of tears was her answer. I could not check her.

"You know it is your mother's. I thought to show you how well such tulle robes become me, a poor creature, and how you always did. It is no use for me to try to please—
I wish—I had never—seen—you."

Shush, shush, sob.

What sob, I do but dry those dark eyes with my own hands and silence her words with kisses, she was such a foolish child, because through petu-lence she disclosed a strong desire to

NOTE THE BEARINGS.

The People Can Hope For No Relief From a Campaign in Which the Tariff is the Only Issue.

It is always proper and many times necessary for those interested in political as well as material affairs to take bearings for the purpose of ascertaining their true position in regard to important factors which may enter into their future progress. It is just as unsafe for the citizen to blindly follow one course, mindless or careless of the changed conditions which time and intelligence have wrought, as it would be for the mariner to shape his direction and then obtain the rudder, leaving against intelligence and a real desire to better conditions? In Kansas last fall the republican party started out on a campaign of tariff and bloody shirt. As a result, the people refused to attend their meetings, and flooded by thousands to listen to alliance and independent speakers discuss the living questions of financial and other reforms. Does any one doubt, if the democratic leaders in Mississippi had confined their speeches to the questions of free trade and the tariff, and ignored the sub-treasury plan and other alliance demands, that the same conditions would have been repeated? Had it been done Senator George and his

Can either party stand a discussion of these questions? Or have they a record touching them that they can successfully defend? The alliance believes and demands a reduction of tariff on the necessities, and that all revenue should be reduced to the needs of government, economically administered, but it will not, neither can it be driven to consider that question only as subordinate to a number of others. No matter what political party the alliance is determined to have finance, land and transportation discussed and settled in preference to all other economic questions. This is the condition at present. It is evident that some new alignment on economic principles is imminent in the near future, or rapid and radical concessions must be made. This latter event can hardly be expected, as the success of trickery and corruption, the power of intrigue and manipulation, and the potency of money have, as yet, gone on from conquering to conquering, and have not met the disasters and defeat that all honest men hope lie in reserve. It is a situation to be seriously considered by the wisest statesman, and can be profitably studied by the humblest citizen. It is one that will not consent to be longer ignored, and cannot be brushed aside with assumption or contempt. He who is wise or prudent will be prepared for the developments of the future, and thereby avoid disappointment and confusion.—National Economist.

NEATLY PUT.

Who Labors Under the Hallucination?—Read and Heed.

Senator Loeffler evidently labors under the hallucination that money is the creation of law. If the senator, who is slightly infected with free trade notions, will carefully examine a few ordinary business transactions of some of his importing friends he will get some new ideas on money.—McClure's Republican.

Many centuries ago Aristotle wrote: "Money by itself has value only by law and not by nature; so that a change of convention between those who use it is sufficient to deprive it of value and power to satisfy all our wants."

Prof. Francis A. Walker, in his work on "Money," says: "Its power of acquisition depends not on its substance, but on its quantity."

Appleton's Cyclopaedia defines money as follows: "The currency of the realm or country; the standard of payment, whether of coins, circulating notes or any other commodity. Anything which freely circulates from hand to hand, as a common, acceptable medium of exchange in any country, is in such country money, even though it cease to be such, or to possess any value, in passing into another country. In a word, an article is determined to be money by reason of its performance of certain functions, without regard to its form or substance."

Among the powers of congress enumerated by the constitution of the United States is this: "To coin money and regulate the value thereof." And there is not a farthing of money of any material or denominational current in the United States today that is not coined in accordance with the terms of a law for that purpose made and provided.

Henry Cernuschi, a most distinguished French writer on finance, said before the monetary commission in 1877: "Money is a value created by law. Its basis is legal and not material. It is, perhaps, not easy to convince one that the value of metallic money is created by law. It is, however, the fact."

The supreme court of the United States in the cases of Knox vs. Lee, and Parker vs. Davis, which were consolidated, made use of the following language: "The constitution was intended to frame a government as distinguished from a league or compact, a government supreme in some particulars over states and people. It was designed to provide the same currency having a uniform legal value in all the states. It was for this reason the power to coin money and regulate its value was conferred upon the federal government, while the same power to emit bills of credit was withheld from the states. The states no longer can declare what shall be money, or regulate its value. Whatever power there is over the currency is vested in congress. If the power to declare what is money is not in congress it is annihilated."

Again in the same case the court declared: "By the obligation of a contract to pay money is to pay that which the law shall recognize as money when the payment is made. If there is any settled law or decision it is this, and we do not understand it to be contravened. No one ever doubted that a debt of $100, contracted before 1861, could be paid by one hundred eagles coined after that year, though they contained no more than ninety-four eagles when the contract was made; and this is not because of the intrinsic value of the coin, but because of its legal value."

Perhaps if the sagacious editor of the McPherson Republican would knock the scales off his eyes and rummage around a little, he might learn something yet if he is not too old.—Topeka (Kan.) Advocate.

Should He Be the Party.

Every man worth less than $90,000 should be in the people's party, from self interest as well as from love of justice, and every man worth more than that sum should be in it from patriotism and philanthropy, and in many cases from self interest also.—Missouri Work.

LEVERETT LEONARD.

There is a Man, a Noble Man, Honest, Loyal and Able.

We see that some of the papers are again booming Commissioner H. J. Amana for the presidency of the F. & L. U. in Missouri. We can hardly see why one who held that position as long as Brother Hickman should be again. We are inclined to think that he should have some new man in the place—a man not in the least tainted with partisanship or ambition and at the same time is thoroughly acquainted with the principles of the F. & L. U. We have in mind a man who helped form the demands of the organization, and one who is thoroughly in earnest in the advance work whom we would like to see made president of the order in Missouri, and that man is Leverett Leonard—Alliance Defender.

Good enough for us, and so far as we can hear, good enough for any body of true alliance men in this state. A man need not go twice to find where L. Leonard stands upon the alliance demands, the correction of the constitution, the need of reform and the possibility of speedily obtaining it by united action. The selection of such a man as Brother L. Leonard for the post of state president would give the alliance in Missouri a forward start that no combination of gall and corruption could resist. He is a man among men, one of those pure, unassuming gentlemen, who, when they encounter a cause give it their whole heart, their time, their energy—everything. He is one of those men about whom there is a subtle something that attracts and holds friends by the score. Do you know what that something is, neighbor? It is the possession of the true characteristics of an honorable gentleman—it is the knowledge that in contact with a true man and a brave one—who when he has convictions is not afraid to give them voice. We are for him. We are glad our neighbor mentioned the name. It was a thrill creep up our spinal column. When a few days ago we thought of L. Leonard, the face and figure of Minor Major, of Lincoln, would stand beside him. They were two were alike in the grandness of their aims, the honesty of their intentions, the nobility of their manhood. Yes, the state alliance of Missouri could do nothing which would so insure its long life as to select this man for the responsible position of state president. There will be no skulking in tents; from now on there will be no slinking of leaders; from his lips no alliance man or anti-alliance would hear a syllable of condemnation of any of our just demands—the Ocala seven. We are for him. From all over this state could arise—disinterested men—and pointing to President Leonard of the Missouri State Alliance, exclaim: "There is a man, a noble man, honest, loyal and able. This is what we need. These are the men this reform movement needs in the forefront. But, if the alliance in this state wants Brother L. Leonard, the president of the ensuing year, the nomination must go to him freely and fully. He will not seek it. Most strongly has he our commendation and our support for that position. There are principles and principles, but these are principles and principles, but this man and his loyalty to the true principles of the right of the people to rule their country is all that could be asked by the order in Missouri for a position upon our own responsibility. The advocacy of Brother L. Leonard by the Alliance Defender, and the holding of his name, gave us the right to speak our convictions. We feel that a position should not go to the state union with little idea of a man, loyal and true, upon whom they could consolidate. Hence we give to them his name, in the name of integrity, ability and loyalty of him who bears it. Letters by the dozens have reached us asking us to mention Brother Leonard, but we did not feel at liberty under the name of our order to culture had spoken, and the Defender gave us the cue. This is the man we need. An unassuming man, a man with the courage of his convictions, a man who will not seek, but be sought. Would that all our officers could be such men as Brother Leonard and Brother Hackett, of Bates county. Believing that the order in Missouri could take no longer stride toward success than by the selection of Brother Leonard as president, we second the nomination of Leverett Leonard by our Ray county exchange, the Alliance Defender, and we are for him.—Marshall (Mo.) Alliance Watchman.

Cannot Afford to Be Side-Tracked.

Don't suffer yourselves to be betrayed with a kiss. The man that tells you that the usefulness of our order is endangered by standing by our principles is deluding himself or tries to deceive the people. To accomplish anything we must be aggressive. We can not afford to compromise with the enemy. The money question is the chief corner-stone in the great edifice of our movement and we can not afford to be side-tracked by the coming state meeting. The question to be decided at our state meeting is not the third party question, but it is to be decided whether or not we will be betrayed by a side platform as suggested by Omaha. This is the question before the brotherhood of Missouri, or to put it in another form, will the alliance in Missouri sustain President Leonard in this third party platform or will she not? Let every brother in Missouri post himself and be prepared to vote intelligently on this all important question.—Interstate Alliance Echo.

KEEPING OUT OF POLITICS.

REPUBLICAN POLITICIAN—My friend, remember that the alliance is a strictly non-partisan organization. You must keep out of politics and continue to vote the republican ticket!

FARMER'S ALLIANCE MAN—"A plague on both your houses." How can I vote and yet keep out of politics. I guess I shall vote for the party that adopts my principles into its platform.

DEMOCRATIC POLITICIAN—Be careful and do not drag the alliance into human politics. Work and vote for the democratic party and all will be well!

here. The conflict must and will continue. Ignorance of the great underlying causes that are producing this upheaval will neither correct our wrongs nor avoid the consequences.—Washington.

—Andrew Carnegie says: "What a grand thing it would be for Great Britain if our country could be brought down to a silver basis." Great Britain did not seem to think so when it sent an emissary over here with $500,000 and secured the demonetization of silver in 1873.—Missouri World.

—The objectionable feature about the sub-treasury plan is that it supports the speculative class, and when you strike the speculative you strike the head and heart of the old parties. Their leaders, in methods of earning or producing the wealth they absorb, are ignorant as they are of heaven.—Non-conformist.

—In 1872, silver being demonetized in France, England and Holland, a capital of $500,000 was raised and Ernest Seyd of London, was sent to this country with this fund as agent of the foreign bondholders and capitalists, to effect the same object—the demonetization of silver, which was accomplished.—The Magazine, August, 1873.

—Among the many questions for discussion proposed by National President Powers, the following are germane to the present agitation: What is money? What are the uses of money? Is money a commodity? Who furnishes the money for this country? Who ought to furnish it? How should money be furnished to the people?—Exchange.

The mighty movement of the masses is shaking the very foundations of the nineteenth century, and even now drawing in due outline the new civilization of the next century. The time was when all eyes were fixed upon the great and powerful kings and warriors of history. Poets sang of them. Literature fawned at their feet. But today all is changed.—Journal of Agriculture of Labor.

A people ignorant of their political and social rights will never select a safe leader of social and political reform. They will be beguiled into placing in power blatant demagogues and crafty place seekers, who will promise everything and perform nothing, who will use the temporary supremacy and position granted them for their own aggrandizement.—Dallas (Tex.) Southern Mercury.

the result of standing on the sandbars, going to pieces on the rocks, or reaching open water as a matter of pure accident or chance. In every campaign since 1873 the tariff has been the leading issue to the exclusion of nearly all others. Efforts are again being made to have the campaign of 1892 a repetition of this character. Is such a course fair to the people, and can the old parties afford to continue it, are questions which the sagacious of either party should consider carefully. During the past twenty years of tariff discussion the people have grown poorer and their burden of indebtedness has grown larger. Neither the force of argument nor the result of experience has settled the questions or decided definitely to the satisfaction of the interested as to what is really the proper course to pursue. In fact, as an economic question it is no nearer than it was a century ago. It would be very difficult just for anyone to clearly define what constitutes republican protection to home industry or democratic tariff reform. The people have discovered that this tariff contention is to a large extent like the beating of drums and blowing of horns to attract attention, while other legislative measures are being enacted. Following up these they have found that whatever faults may lie with the tariff, there are other important factors which experience and information enable them to know positively contribute to the distressed and unhappy condition. These factors and a demand for their removal have been plainly set forth in the demands of the alliance and the platform of the people's party. The situation summed up is about as follows: The republican party is defending the doctrine of protection and ignoring everything else, while the democratic party is advocating tariff reform and straddling all other questions. In opposition to both is the people's party demanding reforms in economic conditions, which the old parties ignore and neglect. The strength of both the old parties lies in the partisanship of its members and not their devotion to principle. It is the love of party and the strength of party that binds them together, and not fealty to the doctrine of free trade or protection. The question for politicians to consider is how much longer will party bonds withstand the present extreme tension? It is probable that partisanship can be depended on as adherents would have met with the same fate that overtook ex-Senator Ingalls and his friends. It is no longer a theory that can be continued with finespun illusions that confronts the politician, but a condition grounded and buttressed in facts that threaten their very existence. What they may say or do should be measured by the exigency of the occasion, and not by apparent candor or earnestness. In view of this the duty of each seems perfectly plain. A general reckoning should be made and the bearings taken in accordance with the best information and thorough knowledge obtainable. It should be a conscientious, intelligent and fearless conclusion, backed up by honesty and continually of purpose. Such a reckoning would avoid the quibbles and shams, the rock and breakers and lead on to safety and a quiet harbor. Will not the intelligent, independent producers of this country begin such an investigation? Would it not be entirely proper to say they had already begun, and that evidences of such an effort could be seen on every hand? Should such a course be undertaken, which of the three parties now before us would be the beneficiary? Would the republican party gain through a thorough discussion of the tariff? Could it bring over to its membership any that now hold to the doctrine of tariff reform? Or could it induce the alliance or the people's party to once more trust its financial policy? These questions answer themselves: It would be an impossible undertaking. How would such an effort result with democracy? Could it bring to its ranks any considerable number of those who now hold opposite views by a continued contest over the tariff? Would republicans in sufficient number desert their party to cut any figure in the result of the coming national campaign? No one believes it possible. In the past, and as such would best serve the interests of the party leaders. Suppose again a strong third party should take the lead, backed up with the Knights of Labor and both the white and colored Alliance, the Farmers' Mutual Benefit Association and other similar organizations, and propose they should ignore entirely the question of tariff and discuss finance, land, transportation and other live questions, what would be the result?

WASHINGTON LETTER.

WASHINGTON, July 31, 1891.

Washington has not had such a lively week, politically speaking, for months as the present one has been, and if outward indications count for anything the Blaine boom has suddenly gone into such proportions as to completely overthrow the Harrison boom, which, up to this week apparently, had the right of way on the Republican track, and the prediction is being freely made that it is only a question of time when Mr. Harrison will formally announce the withdrawal of his name. What has brought about this change? Well, opinions differ. The prominent Republicans here, members of the National Executive committee, and others attracted here by the meeting of that committee, held Wednesday evening, say that there has been no change and that the present situation is the logical outcome of the almost universal demand of the rank and file of the Republican party that Blaine be the nominee; others say that the actions of certain Republicans favorable to Mr. Harrison in helping to spread misrepresentations of Mr. Blaine's actions and health have done the work. I cannot say which, if either, of these opinions is correct; but the fact remains that while Mr. Blaine, according to those who are certainly in a position to speak for him, will not be a candidate, he will do nothing to prevent his being nominated, and if the nomination comes to him without effort on his part he will accept it. That is all his friends wanted, and those Republicans here this week, including the National Executive committee, appear to be all his friends and all certain that he will be the nominee. Well, we shall see.

Statistics are not usually interesting to the average reader, but the statements made this week by the Treasury Bureau of Statistics of the foreign commerce and immigration of the United States for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1891, contain figures that should interest every intelligent person. The total value of our foreign commerce was $1,729,330,896, a much larger amount than it ever reached before in a single year. We imported merchandise to the amount of $844,905,491, and exported $844,425,405 worth. The McKinley tariff law went into effect on October 6, 1890, and from that time until June 30, 1891, a few days less than nine months, we imported merchandise to the value of $689,206,005, against $593,759,905 during a corresponding period in the preceding fiscal year. During the same period the value of goods admitted free of duty was $295,983,665, against $208,983,873 during the same time in the preceding fiscal year. More gold was exported during the last fiscal year than in any single year of our history. Here are the figures: exported, $46,303,622; imported, $18,246,512. The total immigration into the United States during the fiscal year was 555,496, against 451,219 in the preceding year, the increase being largely from the following countries: Italy, 23,854; Austria-Hungary, 14,861; Germany, 31,122, and Russia, including Poland, 28,245. Stop and think a moment over these figures; it will enlarge your ideas of the immensity of this country.

Secretary Foster has quietly ignored the letter recently written by Immigration Commissioner Owen to Representative Niedringhaus taking the ground that Welch tin plate workers can be legally brought to this country under contract, and has written another letter stating that the Treasury department can not undertake to determine in advance of the importation of tin plate workers the legality of bringing them. It is said that the Secretary was very much put out by what he considers Commissioner Owen's bad break, and that he intimated to that gentleman very plainly that a letter of such importance should not have been sent without first being submitted to him. The outcome of the matter is to be a series of regulations supposed to cover everything coming under the alien contract law, which, it is stated, are soon to be issued by the Treasury department.

Two other subordinates of Secretary Foster have been overruled by him in a little matter upon which they had set their hearts. Asst. Secretary Crouse and Treasurer Nebeker it seems found the pleasure of holding office so great that they wished their respective sons to get a share of it, so each of them appointed his son to be his private secretary. When the appointments reached the Secretary he refused to confirm them. Then the two gentlemen put their heads together and the result was that Mr. Crouse appointed Mr. Nebeker's son to be his private secretary and Mr. Nebeker reappointed by appointing Crouse's son to be his private secretary, but Secretary Foster wasn't to be caught by any such deal as that, and he again vetoed the two appointments.

Ashland Park Stations for 1891.

BERMUDA, 5874.

Yearling exhibition 2:39; two-year-old record 2:29; three-year-old record 2:24; (third heat); four-year-old record 2:22; five-year-old record 2:20; (fourth heat); six-year-old record 2:17.

Black horse, 15 hands 3 inches high; foal of June 15, 1883. Bred at Ashland Park.

Sired by BANKER, 4144.

Own brother to Lyander, sire of Lyander Boy 2:29; Wain 2:24; William Kearney 2:23; and others.

First dam Fattie Patchen, trial 2:38 (grandam of Chestnut Wilkes 2:29); by Mambrino Patchen, sire of the dams of Guy Wilkes 2:25; Astral 2:18; Rosa Wilkes 2:18; Elvira 2:18; Cleora 2:18; Henri 2:17; and 29 others in the 2:30 list.

Second dam Maiky by Stanhope's Blood Hawk, sire of dam Abner 2:27; and Guy Wilkes 2:25.

Third dam Fattie, by Downing's Vermont, sire of the dam of Enigma 2:26; Mambrino Bruce 2:44; sire of Kit Curry 2:18; Bell Wilkes 2:25; (Hill) Vermont, sire of Bonner Boy 2:23; and sire of the dams of Abel 2:24; Col. Bradshaw 2:20; Nelly 1:20; and others.

Fourth dam Jesse, by Thomas Jefferson.

He is a beautiful black, with right hind ankle white, stands 15 1/2 hands high, and is a perfect horse, all over, having both bones and substance combined, with the form and finish characteristic of the cross he so well represents; viz. Hambletonian sire and Mambrino Patchen dam. His superior qualities, very best, because public performances have demonstrated its value. Of its many representatives and trainees, the Chief, sire of dams of Governor, 2:30; and Guy Hooker, sire of Maud Macey, 2:17, etc.

As a sire he is of course untitled, his first colts being foaled in 1884, and his yearlings judged at this age no stallion ever sired more uniform natural gaited colts with speed and substance combined, with the following season of 1891 at $200 to insure, the money to be paid as follows: $100 at the time of service; the balance $100 when the mare proves in foal. Being limited to 30 out-mares, parties wishing to breed to him had better book their mares early.

Mares bred by the season, not proving in foal, have the usual privilege of return. I breed sound, highly finished trotters, and have for sale high bred and fillies, out of producing dams, by a greater number of prominent sires, than any farm in the land. For catalogue, which can be had on application. Mares kept at regular rates.

FAYETTE WILKES,

(—203—)

(Trial Oct. 9, 1886, 2:23 1/2).

Bay horse, 15 hands 3 inches high, foaled May 3, 1874.

The handsomest son of his great sire, and the handsomest of any trotting bred horse in the United States.

Sired by ABDALLAH WEST, 2583. (Sire of Wilkin, 2:27).

First dam the dam of Black Cloud 2:17; by Pilot Walker, pacer.

Second dam the Cluke pacing mare.

NOTE.—Abdallah West, 2583, by Allie West, 1st dam Miss Coss, dam of Wilton, 2:18; by Clark Chief, 2d dam Ohio, by American Clay; 3d dam brought from Ohio and represented to be by Brown's Bellfounder; Abdallah West died at six years old. He was the most promising colt ever bred.

West Cloud is a rich mahogany bay, 15 hands 2 inches, with black mane and tail and black legs extending above knees and hocks. He is a powerfully built horse for his height, and has the most finished set of feet and legs to get on a horse of any breed. As a two-year-old he gave evidence of being possessed of remarkable speed, as with little handling he trotted a half mile in 1:18 1/2, and miles in his work in 2:40. At three years old he was not trained, owing to a very severe attack of pink-eye. He also did no work on the track as a four-year-old. As a five-year-old he was judged and trained lightly, for the purpose of ascertaining if he was entirely recovered than with a view of testing his speed. In a few months he trotted a full mile in 2:38 and half in 1:15. This season (1890) he served a few mares of my own and was not put to work until September, and his improvement was most remarkable. He repeatedly trotted halves in 1:10, and I am fully convinced he will with a season's training be in the 2:20 list. I will let him serve 20 mares season of 1891, outside of ten of my own, at $50 THE SEASON, money due at time of service or before removal of mare. The usual return privileges is given to return mare in 1892 should she not get in foal.

Sire of Harry Wilkes 2:15; Guy Wilkes 2:15; Mike Wilkes, pacer, 2:15; Wilton 2:16; So So 2:17; Wilcox, pacer, 2:18; Rosa Wilkes 2:18; Wilton 2:19; Joe Bunker 2:19; Flora Wilkes, pacer, 2:19; Tom Rogers 2:20, etc.

First dam Sally Hamlet (winner of two-year-old Hamlet Stakes in 1875), by Hamlet sire of Loretta F. 2:18; A. Y. Panlind 2:30; Truro, pacer, 2:23; Lady M 2:23; Leontine 2:33; Brookside Flora 2:29; and the dams of Thorsline 2:18; Cyclone 2:23; (Irish) 2:25; Graceland 2:25; and Hamletta 2:25 1/2.

Second dam Sal (dam of Coarser 2:26; Captain Clay, Driftwood, and grandam of Morlowe, pacer, 2:15), by Canada Chief, sire of dams of Governor, 2:30; and Guy Hooker, sire of Maud Macey, 2:17, etc.

Third dam (the dam of Sofo, that produced Blanche, 2:25 1/2), by Imp. Yorkshire, sire of dam of Ashland Chief, sire of Black Cloud 2:17.

Fourth dam by Woodpecker, thoroughbred, sire of Prince 2:27, ten miles in 28:08 1/2.

The fee of Fayette Wilkes is within the reach of all, and lower than that of any horse of equal merit in Kentucky.

SEASON $100.

Mares kept at regular rates.

You cannot find a better school in the mountains of Kentucky. Our rates are low; our methods of teaching Normal, we keep abreast with the tide of education. Our pupils are our best advertisement. We refer you to them.

Hazel Green is the prettiest town in Eastern Kentucky; free from many of the ills of mountain towns, and those of more population; no saloons or houses of temptation. The people welcome strangers, and individuals for good are thrown around them. All boarders will be under the supervision of the teachers. Send for catalogue, etc.
